THE INTRODUCTION OF IMPROVEMENTS AND INVENTIONS GOES SLOWLY IN SOME PARTS OF THE WORLD AFTER ALL

We reproduce on pages two and three recent photographs connected with the cotton industry in Egypt.

One shows workmen fertilizing the fields of growing cotton. The other shows the bales of cotton arriving by camel from the fields. A comparison with the modern cultivating and fertilizing machinery of this country and with its steam and electric transportation lines would indicate that our friends in Egypt are a long way behind.

In marked and pleasing contrast is the appearance of the people of a Southern cotton field illustrated on page four.
